

Futuro Health CEO Van Ton-Quinlivan Named to American Leadership Forum Silicon Valley Board of Directors

[SACRAMENTO, Calif.] – Futuro Health today announced that CEO Van Ton-Quinlivan has been appointed to the Board of Directors of American Leadership Forum – Silicon Valley (ALFSV), a nonprofit that brings together leaders across sectors to strengthen relationships, foster collaborative leadership, and serve the common good.

The appointment deepens Ton-Quinlivan's relationship with ALFSV. In 2025, she was selected for ALFSV Fellows Class XLV, joining a cohort of senior leaders from healthcare, technology, law, energy, government, labor, philanthropy and other sectors. The year-long Fellows experience is designed to expand leaders' perspectives, build trust across differences, and develop networks capable of addressing complex challenges collaboratively.

Futuro Health CEO Van Ton-Quinlivan with ALFSV CEO Erica Yew alongside members of ALFSV Fellows cohort XLV

"Van has built a career serving as a bridge and coalition builder to enable meaningful change for communities," said Erica Yew, ALFSV Chief Executive Officer. "We are delighted to welcome her to the ALFSV Board of Directors and look forward to the perspective and leadership she will bring to our work."

"ALFSV brings together leaders who seek to listen differently, think more broadly and build relationships across sectors," said Ton-Quinlivan. "I'm honored to continue that journey as a board member — a way to strengthen our communities."

About Futuro Health

Futuro Health is a national nonprofit organization addressing the critical shortage of healthcare workers by growing the largest network of allied health workers in the nation. The organization empowers individuals with credentials and qualifications for their first or next healthcare career while building the talent employers need and creating pathways to opportunity for workers. Learn more at FuturoHealth.org.

About American Leadership Forum Silicon Valley

Founded in 1988, ALF Silicon Valley brings together leaders from the business, public and nonprofit sectors to engage in dialogue, develop greater understanding across differences and work together toward an equitable and thriving region. Through its Fellows Program, ALF has built a network of more than 4,500 leaders nationwide.